THE BURNED-OUT ACTORS OF CHICAGO -The following finds prompt insertion in he Appeal, and is respectfully referred for answer:

Estions Appeal—Class charity, if the tarm be a correct one, has been strongly developed by the distress which lately overtook the people of Chicago. Contributions have been made by nearly every class to help persons of the same class; newsheys even, have contributed their mits to the person of their little conding mit. nite to the succor of their little co-dissemi-stors of information; policemen, fire-nen, the different trades, churches and men, the different trades, churches and professions have promptly met as far as in their power isid, the demands of the necessities of their brethern in Chicago. There are two hundred and fifty actors and actresees now in Chicago who lost their all in the great fire, and will not the profession in this city give one night's performance for their benefit? What say the managers and the company?

A SUPE,

The above is strengthened by an appear from Mrs. Lander, who informs a friend in New York that she was not so unfor-tunate at the Chicago fire as the newspa-per paragraphs have been representing. Through the kindness of a total stranger and a New Yorker, able was taken from the Tremont House beyond the limits of the fire, losing none of her thestrical wardrobe or other luggage. In the note, in which this is mentioned, she throws in which this is mentioned, she throws out an excellent suggestion: "Some of the proceeds of the benefits for Chicago should be appropriated especially to relieve professional sufferers, actors and others, thrown out of a winter's employment by the burning of the theaters. Twelve hundred dellars was thoughtfully sent from St. Louis to the managers for distribution; but there are over 250 actors homeless and friendless, and you can judge how slight is this relief for such a case."

The speech of Mr. Phelan and General Breckinridge's response were brief and tasteful and the entertainment, at which Mejor O'Bannon presided, was worthy of his own and the fame of his distinguished guests.

Must the Memphis and Charleston road be disposed of by its present owners, that Tom Scott may make it part of his East Tennessee line, or will General Breckenridge and Mejor Wicks be suffered to double and quadruple the wealth of the country beyond Nashville by the completion of the road from Huntaville to Sparta and Lexington? Tuesday evening about dark Justice Spellman was called upon to hold an in-quest on the body of a colored man that had been found beyond the city limits, near Wolf river. The 'Squire traveled near Wolf river. The 'Squire traveled through brush and undergrowth till he was covered with burrs from head to foot, was covered with burrs from head to foot, before he arrived at the spot where the fatal shooting was done. The old negro was found lying on his back, a small pistol beside him, and a hole through his head. The body was considerably decomposed, indicating that death must have taken place some days previously. There was nothing found on the person of the dead man save very poor garments, a teaspoon, and a half empty box of matches. The jury said that he committed suicide, and the 'Squire ordered the body to be interred at the expense of the county.

UNION DEPOT-A SUGGESTION.

Editors Appeal—The locality of the Memphis and Charleston railroad depot is more central than any part of the present or prospective city of Memphis. The space occupied is triangular in shape, space occupied is triangular in snape, lying in such a manner as to interrupt Court and Jefferson streets, its greatest width being from Adams to Madison on the line of Lauderdale. Let us suppose the opposite triangle formed by Charleston avenue, Madison street and the bayou. be appropriated for railroad uses. Together these triangles form a square, Charleston avenue dividing it disgonally.

The Memphis and Ohio railroad, by curving into Wiochester avenue, might pass through Bull Run and High streets to this Selms road, using the old LaGrange route and by throwing in a curve between Wal with and reach the central depot by the present Charleston railroad route. The ground is ample to accommodate the local business of all the roads, and is admirably located for a grand union passenger depot. As to elevators and river connections, lat the Little Rock road determine whether to cross from Hope field to the navy yard by boats carrying cars with their load, or to do the same thing from the "point" below the city by Novi Pickwing. In either worth the depot, and at the same time all road would reach the river at the point selected
